The first word was that the number of passengers from our village on board, this carried 'consternation to their friends here, and all were eager to ascertain in regard to the safety of those in whom they were more particularly interested. We are glad to say that this report of the great loss of life proved untrue, and that among the saved were all from Cheboygan. Those from this village on the ill-fated steamer were Miss Sadie Van Arsdale, Mrs. Lizzia Sharn Miss Januia Sharn and Lizzia Sharn Miss Januia Sharn and passengers. The assistant engineer was number of passengers from our village Lizzie Sharp, Miss Jennie Sharp, and Thomas Sharp. Beside these residents of our village, there were others who took passage here, who had many acquaintances and friends among our citizens among them being W. A. King, of St. Catherines, Ont., who has spent the most of the summer in our village. He was also an hour before she was picked up. She is reported as keeping cool under the trying circumstances, and thus, not only preserving her own life, but that of a lady who was clinging to a cot, and who a number of times was about sinking, when Miss Van Arsdale rendered her aid and and selection for valuable assistance.

The people of Alcona did everything in their power for the survivors. They gave them food, shelter and clothing while they were given rousing cheers on the departure of the survivors.

time, next week. I went out on the promenade deck and asked the mate if the steam blowers were on. He replied: "I don't know." I ordered him below to turn them on full head, if possible, and then went on the hurricane deck and got a stream of water from the deck on to the flames, and placed the same in charge of the second mate. I then learned that Mate Smith had got a stream of water on the flames from the main deck on the discovery of the fire, and before I was called. He had the poney engine at work, and then got a force at work on the hurricane deck with the buckets, 37 in number. At first the water seemed to quell the flames, but they immediately broke through the skylight on the deck, about seven feet forward of the stack, and spread almost instantly across the boat. The whole boat seemed afire amidships, I was then satisfied we could not subdue the flames or save the boat, and therefore ordered the mate to lower the boats and life rafts.

soms. It may be truly said that my mind has undergone considerable change upon this southern question within the past two years.

I think you will agree with me that as Democrats we have not always adhered to the same political ideas.

In 1861, as Democrats we oppose coercion, and denied any authority in the constitution for it. We have not adhered to this very strictly—we think the constitution a little more than a compact, operative only during the pleasure of the states.

We opposed the issue of the greenback and maintained that it was unconstitutional to make it a legal tender. We have modified our views somewhat upon Democratic newspapers to believe it was.

Those who control the public affairs of the south do not revere or even respect the government of the United States. They claim attachment for the federal constitution as they interpret it; but their interpretation robs me of my respect for it.

If the people of the south were as loyal to the government and as true to liberty as are the people of Michigan, emigration to the south would equal that to the west, and enterprise, thrift and contentment would take the place of inactivity, decay and restlessness.

The great need of the south to-day is loyal men—men loyal to the nation, loyal to liberty, men tolerant of the rights of others, men who love labor. It is suffering for the want of stalwart
